He warned Americans of the looming dangers of "globalization," decried the end of "the unity in diversity that is America," and reiterated that the Iraqi regime was "destabilizing." In one of the speech's more surreal moments, Bush suggested that "in the new century, the center of world power may not be America." In the next moment, the president announced that he was scrapping parts of the No Child Left Behind Act to 9df0af710a
