CloudTimer is a simple tool that provides the user with a unique ID and a single-click solution for giving your own time to your organization. No server administration needed, no extra expense, just a click. CloudTimer allows you to store the time that your user has been working in different organizations in one single log. This tool is simple to use and very fast. The application stores time spent online, offline, in meetings or in client-presentations, without the need for a server. The CloudTimer Web Applet itself can be deployed on the client machine, as a Web-plugin or as a hosted applet on its own Web site. When the user logs into the Web site, CloudTimer displays the time that he has worked during his computer session, locally and any information from other computers on the network. CloudTimer can be set for any browser and also synchronizes with the cloud synchronizer. This way, CloudTimer keeps a complete record of all time spent on the computer and the synchronizer lists the time that you spent at all locations. In addition, CloudTimer can monitor multiple users at the same time. It provides a list for all the users working on the computer. Each user can be assigned a specific color to identify him more easily. CloudTimer works only when the user works directly on the web browser of his computer. The tool can log all the time spent in clients meetings and conferences, without the need of a server. It can track time spent in client presentations or workshops and any other meeting. The Web-interface allows the users to view the logs in just a few clicks. The user can edit, add and remove entries to the log, simply by clicking the appropriate icon. What's New in the AdSysNet AD Logon Reporter?

It is a simple to use, yet reliable application dedicated to centralizing the data from users' workstations. The application can help Active Directory administrators view reports on the users' logon times and whether or not the attempts were successful. It is a simple security tool for verifying network activity. Using AdSysNet AD Logon Reporter, Active Directory administrators can view a full reports of the users who tried to logon to a specific domain. The report includes details on the username, logon time, workstation or authentication. Moreover, the program can reveal failed logon attempts and help you detect the reasons why a user could not logon. This way, unauthorized attempts to access the Active Directory can be revealed and recorded. AdSysNet AD Logon Reporter can generate specialized failure reports, due to username, domain controller or workstation inconsistency. It can detect whether the password was wrongly entered, if the account name is disabled, expired or locked. The application requires installation on a sign station, since it can centralize data across the network. However, a client installer is also available and can be installed on other admin stations, for generating the reports.

AdSysNet AD Logon Reporter can generate the summaries based on the Domain Controllers events. Of course, you need to specify the domain controllers during the configuration of the program.

Alternatively, you can open the Service Manager component and modify service, scope and database parameters with a few mouse clicks. You may also add several new domains on the monitoring list, by specifying the name, username, all the domain controllers and configured controllers. AdSysNet AD Logon Reporter allows you to effectively monitor the network activity and Active Directory logon attempts. It can gather information in real time and display both the successful and failed logon procedures, in separate tables. You may filter the entries based on usernames, DCs and workstations, in order to better observe inconsistencies.
